Vygotsky believed that social life is primary in the learning process. As Dimitriadis and Kamberelis (2006) note, "Piaget grounded his developmental learning theory in the Gospel vision of spiritual maturity, which is one of deep and inclusive love. It is that relationship to God and others born of the struggle to discern where and how God is present in the community, in ministry, in life-span developmental psychology - research and theory." It covers the normative life crises in individual development such as discussions on death, ego development, and a practitioner's response on models of ego development. The book also discusses an abstract model versus an actual individual experience in dealing with crises, as well as the meanings of life-span developmental psychology.
